Recessions dramatically increase the incident rate for bankruptcies, delinquent loans, unfulfilled agreements and white collar crime. While these are naturally occurring events in the business cycle, they are nonetheless painful for creditors, investors and the companies involved. Are there assets that can be recovered in these instances? Will there be something to recover if litigation is initiated? What due diligence process can be implemented to minimize such losses? Christopher T. Marquet, founder and CEO of Marquet International Ltd., will be presenting a discussion on how to conduct an asset recovery investigation which includes these questions. This presentation will discuss a methodology for conducting asset searches and due diligence inquiries utilizing modern research techniques while remaining within legal and ethical boundaries.
